

The Power of Paint by Kirsten Billings

For instant appeal, or just a change of mood, don't underestimate the miracle effect that paint will have on tired, dated or dingy walls!

Less work and less expense than most people believe, a fresh coat of paint is truly an instant makeover for tired rooms. Whether your walls are in need of a change, a little updating or you're considering listing your home for sale, painting your home will be time and money well spent.

Trends change so to keep your home current ask your local paint store what the most popular colours are. Sticking with the classics will help prevent having to repaint as often. Benjamin Moores Revere Pewter (pictured above) is their most popular colour of all time and goes with nearly every decor.

If you're thinking of selling...

Try to avoid statement colours or personalizing your choices to go with a funky old chair in the corner. Buyers need to be able to visualize their possessions in your space and if you've chosen an accent wall of chartreuse, they will have a hard time seeing past that yellowy green wall.

Instead choose classic colours that compliment your decor and inspire buyer to see themselves in that space. Not only will your home show well with fresh paint, but a newly painted room appears clean and fresh.
